

ecancermedicalsience profile

ecancermedicalsience (ecancer) is the online, non-profit journal from the European Institute of Oncology. ecancer publishes peer-reviewed articles as well as reporting on cancer news, filming and webcasting cancer conferences, and providing an online community for those involved in cancer research and treatment.

It was founded by Professor Umberto Veronesi and Professor Gordon McVie at the European Institute of Oncology in Milan, in partnership with ECCO - the European CanCer Organisation and is supported by the Fondazione Umberto Veronesi, Fondazione IEO and Swissbridge.

ecancer aims to improve communications between sub-specialised cancer scientists and clinicians by working interactively and faster – offering a rapid peer review process as well as video, audio, job and event listings. ecancer actively encourages the communities of sub-specialised scientists and cancer carers to exchange ideas and research, speeding up the time it takes from discovery, to patient benefit.